A WHOLESALE WEDDING. A correspondent of the Memphis Appeal, thus describes a connubial convention and demonstration that occurred recently on the plantation of Capt. J. W. Jones, near

Then with preliminary arrangements, they with each of their attendants, four in number, marched forth to join the Henry Brown, de'd., a good location for a marbrides and their attendants, under the blue ket garden. They fice, at 12 o'clock, on the 1st of July. (the nine couples and attendants) then formed and marched in silence in front of the dwelling where had assembled many friends of Capt. Jones and Mr. Hubbard to see an unusual sight; nine happy couples to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. John Rosser, servant of Major John Rosser of Camden, South Carolina.

Each couple, with their attendants, marched up after the ceremony, by our pious minister, and he knelt in prayer, implering Heaven to bless each one of the nine couples. And, sir, the prayer seemed to be breathed with fervor and devotion for assistance from on High on his fellow servants. After prayer, such kissing and joy as was manifested by the friends of each! Then in a few minutes, supper was announced; and permit me to say, that it was the most orderly crowd I have ever seen of blacks, attributable, no doubt, to no spirits or wine being used on the occassion. After supper, came the dance for the non-religious; but near by on another equally beautiful grass plot, were found about one half-the religious-in play of Sister Phoebe and other kindred plays. And never have I had the pleasure of seeing a happier pretty faces:

WHEN WOMEN SHOULD BE LOOKED AT. A writer in the Atlantic Monthly thus en-

"There are some very pretty, but unhappily very ill bred women, who don't understand the laws of the road with regard to handsome faces. Nature and custom would no doubt agree in consigning to all males the right of at least two distinct looks at every comely female countenance, without any infraction of the rules of courtesy or the sentiment of respect. The first look is necessary to define the person of the individual one meets so as to avoid her in passing. Any usual attraction discovered in a first glance is sufficient apology for a second-not a prolonged and impudent stare, but an appreciating homage of the eyes, such as a stranger may inoffensively yield to a passing image. It is astonishing how morbidly sensitive some vulgar beauties are to the slightest demonstration of this kind. When a lady AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS, &c. walks the streets she leaves her virtuous indignation countenance at home; she knows well enough that the street is a picture gallery, where pretty faces framed in pretty to order, Pitt's celebrated Horse Powers and bonnets, are meant to be seen, and everybody has a right to see them." PARISIAN FASHIONS.

The Paris correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says the most pretty and becoming novelties for summer bonnets are of crape and tulle, with garlands, tufts of flowers, and a bandeau, in the form of a diadem across the forehead. The fancy straws are extremely elegant, one especially of black and straw colored squares, tastefully frimmed with gold colored velvet and black guipure. The just style of trimming for the very white and fine Belgian straw, is a large bow of black taffeta ribbon on the top of the bonnet; the barolet is of spotted tuile, and all the edges of the bonnet and barelet are bordered with fancy colored velvet; cherry forms the best contrast with the black bow; the inside of the bonnet is formed of white blonde, and the strings are of white ribbon.
